Eagleton Denies Drunken Driving

HONOLULU, July 27.—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton today labeled as "a damnable lie" a report hy columnist Jack Anderson that records show the senator had been arrested by the Missouri police on charges of drunken and reckless driving. The vice-presidenallegations drive him from

_In Jefferson City, Missouri's capital, the assistant superinten-dent of the state highway patrol. George Phipps said "We have no records in our files such as Mr. Anderson is quoting. He said there had been two incidents concerning his driving. neither involving alcohol . In the first, he said, he was fined $35 and $11 court costs after speeding March 11, 1962, between St. Louis and Jefferson City, Mo. He said he had been trying to get in a television news program on time. . In the second incident, the senator from Missouri said, he skidded on an icy road in December, 1963, and damaged the left fender and grille of his car. He said he had not been charged. "I'm not g ing to let a lie drive me from this ticket." Sen. Eagle-

-President Nixon lashed out today at critics of his Vietnam policy and said that the North Vietnamese were promoting a "hypocritical double standard" in hombing dikes and dams. The chief executive delivered a spirited defense of U.S. policy in Vletnam at an impromptu news conference in his office. He sald that the United States was applying great restraint-we could finish off North Vietnam in an afternoon"—and that his policy was geared to gain a negotlated settlement.

Mr. Nixon sharply criticized congressional supporters of "endthe-war" resolutions, "Those who say end the war should name their resolutions prolong the war." he said, They are "only confusing the enemy at best and prolonging the war at worst," he said.

The United States has made fair offers in the Paris peace talks and has not adopted a take-it-or-leave-it altitude, the President sald. But he repeated that the United States would not accept proposals that would lead to the imposition of a Communist government on South Viernam.

That "would be the height of immorality," he said. On domestic matters, Mr. Nixon said that the forthcoming pres-idential election offered the clearest choices on candidates and issues of any national election in this century.

Damage Admitted The 40-minute news conference's first question dealt with bombing, which the administration has acknowledged caused incidental damage to the dikes and dains in North Vietnam. Rather than helps subject to domestic and foreign criticism, the chief executive said, the United Stales should be supported and praised for restraint. Then, specifically mentioning UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, who asked for an end to bombing near the dikes. Mr. Nixon said that it was "time to strip eway the double standard." Mr. Waldheim and others have "seized upon enemy-inspired propaganda," President Nixon said, "and have not mentioned the deliberate shelling of South Vietnamese cities by the Communists.

While Mr. Nixon did not directly confirm that the dikes had been hit, he said that there was no report of any strikes on the halfdozen major dams which he described as the heart of the 2,700mile system.

Week to Destroy

"If it were the policy of the United States to bomb dikes, we could take them out in a week, Mr. Nixon said. "We are trying to avoid civilian casualties and not cause them." He said that U.S. Ambassador

Ellsworth Bunker at his request had cahled from Saigon a new report on civilian casualties hecause of the North Vietnamese offensive, which began at Easter. So far, Mr. Nixon said, there have been 45,000 civilian casualties in South Vletnam, including 15,000 dead, while 860,000 persons have been made homeless. Turning to his domestic critics.

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP). Mr. Nixon said that if the United States adopted the policy adgressmen, a bloodbath would fol-low in South Vietnam "because at least a million have been marked for assassination." Without mentioning names --

Senate Votes Funds to St Construction of 4th A.Con

WASHINGTON, July 27.-The of all the crude oil and Senate, in its first major test on the defense budget, approved funds yesterday to start construction on a fourth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, a vessel that will cost at least $1 billion. By a 60-to-29 vote, the Senate rejected an amendment by Sex. William B. Saxbe, R., Ohio, to delete from a military procurement bill $229 million earmarked for the carrier. The funds would be used to buy long lead-time items, such as the nuclear-powerplant, for the carrier.

The lopsided vote underscored the fact that much of the forse has gone out of the defense debate that has annually gripped the Senate for weeks in recent years. The Pentagon critics, however, expected to do somewhat better today and perhaps prevail on a move by Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen D. Texas, to eliminate $508 million of the $926 million requested by the administratioo for accelerated development of the Trident missile-launching submarines, each of which is expected to cost at least $1.3 billion.

In reporting out a bill author-izing $20.5 billion in new-weapons procurement and military research, the Senate Armed Services Committee cut $2.7 billion from the administration's request. Rather than attempt further overall cuts in the budget, the Pentagon critics decided to concentrate this year on two items—the carrier and the Trident submarine—and leave lead-ership of the battle to two independent conservatives on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Annoyed by Challenge In the floor debate, Sen. John Stennis, the committee chairman. expressed some annoyance at being challenged by tha two most junior members of his committee -Sen, Saxbe and Sen, Bentsen, "I have been on this committee a long time," he observed at one point, and "the few who have been in this body two or four years are entitled to know the opinions of those who have been here longer." Seldom on the Senate floor has the magisterial Stennis been exposed to such direct talk from one of his committee members as from Sen, Saxbe, whose tangue can be as acidic as the tobacco he regularly chews. At one point in the concluding debate. Sen. Saxbe described the carrier es "the dodo of modern warfare," which "you can sick with a motorboat." Describing the carrier as "the backbone of the Navy." S.m. Stemis acknowledged that it might be vulnerable in nuclear warfare, but, he said, "the carrier." can move around and might last longer than anything else." In other congressional develop-

Johnny Cash, 2 Ex-Convicts Cite Horrors of Prison Life

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP). -Citing personal experiences, singer Johnny Cash and two exconvicts yesterday painted a grim picture of prison life, which, they said, can be a daily routine of assault and sometimes murder.

"It's a society where your life isn't worth a pack of cigarettes," said Gien Sherley, a former convict who has been aided by Mr. Cash.

Harland Sanders, another exconvict, said that he once had to break a guitar over another intacked him with a razor.

Mr. Cash, who was accompanied by his wife, June Carter, spoke before the Senate Subcommittee on National Penitentia-executive; "I think I really opened their eyes." Mr. Cash and the two ex-convicts spoke on behalf of a measure that would reform the federal corrections system. A major part of the bill would establish a Federal District Offender Board that would oversee the prisoner from arrest, through imprisonment and to parole.

Mr. Cash, a former prisoner for brief stays in several city and county fails, said that he was concerned particularly about young men and first-offenders. the hardened criminal," he said. "I realize we may have to spend millions to build new buildings but we need to separate them."

He told the subcommittee of an incident that occurred at an Ar-kansas state prison the day before he performed there.

Mr. Cash said that a 15-yearold boy, arrested for car theft, was put in the prison and then raped by other inmates. "He died the next day," the singer said.

As another example, Mr. Cash said that a teen-age boy was put in a Virginia prison and officials. took his clothes from him. "It so shamed him, be hanged himself," he said.

Mr. Cash called for a relaxation of the laws dealing with marinana.

"I know a lot of kids, lots of them," he said. "By the time they're 18, they've tried it. I tried it myself.

Nixon Asks New Funds to Fight Drugs

Also Establishes Intelligence Office

WASHINGTON, July 27 (A) -President Nixon established Narcotics Intelligence Office the Justice Department today to sent Congress a request for spinillion in supplemental funds drug-abuse treatment, prevent and law enforcement.

At the same time, the Wh House disclosed that new stat. tics indicated that there are a most twice as many heroin ac dicts in the United States as wa previously estimated.

The supplemental request is necessary, deputy White House press secretary Gerald L. Warren said because of new statistics on heroin addiction "not available when the budget was submitted." Rather than the 315,000 addicts estimated in the budget sent to Capitol Hill in January, be said, the new estimate is between 500,-

000 and 600,000 addicts. He said the revised figure does not mean there are more addicts but "shows there are more than we were aware of."

Of the supplemental request the White House said $120 m lion would be used to expal. federally funded drug treatment. and research facilities. This would bring to $328 million the federal support of treatment programs—a figure the White House said is 1,200 percent above fiscal 1969's federal spending on such programs. The new Narcotics Intelligence Offfice will analyze and ordinate information on drug traffickers, information collected by such existing organizations as the Customs Bureau and the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, the White House said.

The data will be passed to government agencies to help stop the flow of drugs domestically and internationally, Mr. Warren said, Its director, who will be paid, $38,000 a year, has not been selected, be said.

The spokesman said the rcvised estimate on beroin addict: is based on new statistical information developed by government agencies. But a White House fact sheet said completely reliable estimates on the beromaddict population still are not

U.S., Saigon Kept Secret of Copter Disaster 2 Weeks

SAIGON, July 27 (AP).—The U.S. and South Vietnamese commands concealed details of a disastrous combat assault which included the worst death toll of any helicopter crash in the Vietnam war, it was learned today.

Officers in the field charged that inaccurate U.S. B-52 bombing was partly responsible for the disaster, in which 29 of 31 American helicopters were hit by ground fire during an assault north of Quang Tri City July 11. One of the U.S. Marine CH-53 helicopters crashed, killing 50 South Vietnamese marines coard. The Saigon command adnitted the toll today in response to queries from reporters, who learned of the casualties from private sources.

South Vietnamese officers in the field said a B-52 strike that was supposed to soften up the landing zone shortly before the assault was a half-mile off target. The officers said the belicopters landed in the middle of a powerful enemy force that had the South Vietnamese marines out-

New Realism

Symptomatic of the new mood of realism-contrasting with the optimism shown by Washington before the conference resumed here on July 13 after a 10-week interruption-were remarks by the South Vietnamese and American delegation press spokesmen.

Saigon press aide Nguyen Trieu Dan characterised the Communist speeches at the conference session as "totally negative," "polemical in tone" and proof that "the Communists still rebuff negotia-

His American counterpart, Da-vid Lambertson, said "perhaps there was a reversion to polemic compared to the Communist statements in the preceding two ssions. But he noted that the polemics were read to us in a reasonably nonpolemical manner.

Taken to task by Xuan Thuy for alleged "systematic and de-liberate" American bombing of North Vietnam's dikes, U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter in-sisted, "We bave not targeted the dikes."

He told the Communist delegates that "you make no claim that military equipment or installations were not emplaced near dikes or related structures."

Upon emerging from the negotiating session, Mr. Thuy said, "It is to be remarked that the American delegate admitted the bombing of dikes and dams, but alleged these bombines were accidental." Referring to reports by foreign visitors and journalists, Hanoi's press spokesman, Nguyen Thanh Le, told his press briefing that "we never put a military installation on a dike."

Repeated Hits

He replied to American explanations about accidental damage by insisting that some sections had been hit several times in the same place. He mentioned seven such attacks against a dike in Haihung Province and five attacks against a single dam elsewhere in North Vietnam,

Mr. Porter continued his reply by noting that "as I pointed out during these talks last October, and as the mayor of Hanoi has confirmed recently, you did not repair the damage done by last year's floods."

Ellsberg Trial Is Halted For Hearing on Wiretap

By Sanford J. Ungar

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and two judges on the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Ap-peals yesterday halted the Pentagon papers trial, pending resolution of a bitter controversy over government wiretapping. Ruling just two and a half hours before the prosecution was scheduled to present its opening statement against Daniel Elisberg and Anthony Russo, the unusual three-judge panel said that all proceedings in the case must stop until the Circuit Court has considered an emergency defense

When the jury of eight women and four men came into his courtroom at 1:30 p.m. for what they expected to be the start of the trial, they were told by U.S. District Court Judge W. Matt Byrne ir. to go home until summoned back by the court.

An hour later, three judges from the Court of Appeals convened an emergency hearing on the defense request for a writ of mandamus against Judge Byrne, requiring him to disclose to the defense the contents of a secret

> Judge Byrne rejected that argument Tuesday and even refused to tell the defense which person on a list of 16 names had been overheard during the wiretap. Yesterday's events in the case unfolded with uncommon speed because the entire Ninth Circuit Court and Justice Douglas were attending a judicial conference in Pasadena, Calif., east of Los Angeles.

Appellate Judge Walter Ely. the senior member of the Circuit Court assigned to Los Angeles; James R. Browning, of Great Falls, Mont., another Circuit Court member, and Justice Douglas beard the defense request and granted the order to stay the trial.

A Supreme Court justice's participation in such a proceeding is extremely rare, but Justice Douglas was apparently included since—as highest judicial authority in the Ninth Circuit—he might later have been consulted anyway.

In another significant ruling, Judge Byrne denied a government request that the four still officially secret "diplomatic" volumes of the Pentagon papers be kept from the public during submitted in evidence.

The defendants' right to a publie trial, Judge Byrne said, requires that "any documents sub-mitted into evidence in this trial will all be handled in the same When Mr. Ellsberg reportedly disclosed by columnist Jack Anderson, The Washington Post and others, but the prosecution had insisted that they were still entitled to protection as highly classified information.

Yesterday afternoon, a regular three-judge panel of the Ninth Circuit Court—Charles M. Metrill and M. Oliver Koelsch of San Francisco and Ozell M. Trask of Phoenix, Ariz., heard 90 minutes of argument on the wiretap con-troversy in the federal court-house here.

Pompidou Discusses Money, EEC Summit With Italians

LUCCA, Italy, July 27 (IET). for two and a half hours today near this Tuscan town, with near this Tuscan town, with most of their efforts directed at solving Europe's monetary problems and getting on with preparations for a fall summit meeting.

Spokesmen Georges Pompidou and Premier Giulio Andreotti said after the meeting that the two men were looking for "reasonable monetary solutions" that would enable Italy to return to the Basel monetary agreement, which narrowed the fluctuation bands between currendes of nations in the European Economic Community. Toward the end of their talk, Guide Carli, governor of the central bank of Italy, joined the two men. The French are trying to bring Italy back into the Basel agreement by the end of September, but so far the Italians have shown no intention of doing so.

The Italians asked for an exception to the Basel accords to allow them until September to use dollars to pay off their foreign debts, rather than gold. France has been urging both. Italy and Britain, which has a floating currency, to return to the international agreements so that Europe can present a com-mon front when world monetary talks begin next year.

It appeared tonight that the two delegations were working toward some kind of agreement involving central bank coopera-tion that would enable Italy to return to the Basel accord. The French were still being as coy as ever on the future of the October summit meeting.

Both Mr. Andreotti and Presi dent Giovanni Leone, who met with Mr. Pompidon earlier, urged the French not to postpone the summit, but Mr. Pompidou replied that everything depended on the preparations. There was strong implication that preparations would be aided by the right Italian monetary decision.

This rather unusual summit seeting in sunny Tuscany really became an affair of villa hopping today, as Mr. Pompidon went from Mr. Leone's residence, San Rossore, with its immense bunting grounds, to Villa Torrigiani to meet Mr. Andreotti, and finally on to Vills Reale di Marlia, private villa lent to the French for Mr. Pompidou's stay. The two delegations picked Tuscany for Mr. Pompidou's first visit as president to Italy precisely to give it a relaxed atmosphere.

By James Goldsborough In his toast to Mr. Leone at lunch, Mr. Pompidou spoke of the two "sister Latin nations," and said they were so close that as in a marriage there was oc-casional irritation. He said that the two countries must work together to create not only a united Europe, but a "meridional and Mediterranean Europe." It was his only reference to a common Mediterranean policy, a subject to be discussed in full to-Security Talks Response HELSINKI, July 27 (UPD .-Several countries have accepted

Sen. Eagleton's Problem

pocaking in Los Angeles, Sen. Thomas Eagleton remarked wryly that until the other day his audience expected to be addressed by "Tom Who"? But the Demoeratic vice - presidential candidate has emerged very abruptly from the purely local and senatorial recognition he had thus far achieved. Thanks to his medical history, "tom who," in the senator's own phrase, "has become a household word."

Mr. Eagleton's clinical problem, as illustrated by a series of hospitalizations for nervous exhaustion, is not one on which a lay audience can pass a scientific judgment -certainly not without an objective medical report. That, it may be pointed out, has not yet been forthcoming.

But this very uncertainty is precisely what creates a political problem for the senator and for presidential candidate McGovern. The American people, like most of the West, has become far more sophisticated about mental illness in the course of the past generation or so. Psychiatry has become a part of life, rather than something brushed under the rug, and few families have had no experience with it. the syndromes it deals with and its potential for cure. The way in which Mr. Eagleton's senatorial colleagues. on both sides of the aisle, including Senator McGovern himself, have supported Mr. Eagleton in these critical hours is evidence of

Among the elements of this relative sophistication, however, is the knowledge that there is no wonder drug, no infallible technique, for producing either an absolute cure or even a certain prognosis in most ailments affecting the mind. Great Britain, in a poisoning case last month, had grim illustration of that, And, even assuming that Mr. Eagleton's clinical problem is not serious; and may well present no obstacle to his continoed functioning as a public servant in high levels of government, there still remains the question as to whether soch assumptions are safe, when the level is, to uss the current cliche, only a heartheat away from the lonely summit.

The political aspect of the problem is complicated by the fact that Mr. McGovern's campaign needs all the strength it can get, to unify a disgruntled party and summon up the votes of a still skeptical country.

Then, too, the fact that Mr. McGovern was not aware of Mr. Eagleton's medical history when he chose him as running mate raises additional questions as to whether the presidential candidate would really have gone forward with the Eagleton candidacy had he known all the facts, and whether his present attitude reflects more than a loyal acceptance of a falt accompli.

Many strong McGovern supporters are calling for a new vice-presidential candidate. For Mr. McGovern to force that issoe now might be embarrassing for him and for Mr. Eagleton. The issue, therefore, is up to the senator from Missouri. It is certainly a hard choice-but important, for him, for McGovern, and for the political health of the country. A problem that began clinically and developed politically, has become starkly personal Soviet-American trade seems to have borne fruit far sooner than the most hopeful optimists had anticipated—and far greater fruit, too. We say "seems" because both the size and the firmness of the multi-deals announced last week by Armand Hammer, the unassuming 74-year-old chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., are unclear. An old Moscow hand who did business in Russia in the 1920s, Dr. Hammer (he's an MD.) heads a group of American, European and moltinational corporations which have made five-year extendable and expandable agreements to furnish the Russians technology and apparently capital and marketing services in five areas: oil and natural gas, fertilizer and chemicals, metal treating, hotels and solid waste disposal. Whether this is the largest Soviet-"American" business deal on record, or the largest deal of any national denomination, can't be known until the billions are toted up in, say, five or 10 or 20 years. But that it's immense, and that it lets Dr. Hammer and his colleagues in on the ground floor of hoge and growing sectors of the Soviet economy, is beyond goestion. Reporting on the economic breakthrough.

Dr. Hammer's Prescription: Soviet-U.S. Trade

the formidable Dr. Hammer gave full credit to the political opening created by the summit. Through the 1960s he had tried in vain to do major business with Moscow: in the weeks after May he forged ahead. It seems that for the Russians the summit signifled much more than an opportunity to do more trading with the United States: It signified a decision to loosen the traditional Soviet attachment to a doctrine of economic selfreliance and instead to accept a larger measure of integration into the international economy. A careful man who knows the multinational ropes, Dr. Hammer has arranged "his" deals (that is to say, as well, Moscow had arranged its deals with him) to avoid dependence on official policy determinations by the United States. By seeking capital from European banks to open the big Rossian natural gas fields, for instance, official guarantees of American bank loans become unnecessary, at least for purposes of this deal. By taking payment in gas rather than hard currency, it becomes similarly immaterial whether Congress grants the Soviet Union the tariff equality that would let the Russians earn the extra dollars they need to buy extra American goods.

Dr. Hammer has gone ahead, moreover, without waiting for consummation of the Soviet-American trade agreement which Secretary of Commerce Peterson is now negotiating in Moscow. The purpose of that agreement is to remove some of the obstacles, such as the Soviets' Lend-Lease debt, which have been the visible symbols of past Soviet-American disinclination to do business. Whether the new Hammer announcement has removed some incentive from the Russians to compromise on issues bearing on the trade agreement, or whether the announcement has only whetted the Russlans' appetite for further deals they can make only by concluding the trade agreement, remains to be seen.

What is clear from the Hammer deals, and from the $750 million grain sale announced in Washington a fortnight ago, is that the conventional wisdom about Soviet-American trade is proving inadequate to explain or forecast its newly developing forms and dimensions. The Russians won't spend big money, it used to be said; they won't risk making themselves dependent for supplies or markets on countries with which they're likely to have sharp political disputes; they have nothing to sell to the industriallzed West; they demand harsh political quid pro quos: they don't keep their word: they take years to sign on the dotted line. These and other familiar notions are now being tested and, to a greater or lesser extent, found wanting.

Economically speaking, the United States and the Soviet Union are two strangers circling each other, their eagerness to expand contacts nipping and tugging at their old habits of wariness and distrust. It will be fascinating to see how the two biggest economies in the world-perhaps one should throw in West Europe and Japan and make it four-learn from each other and interrelate with each other, if and as détente

Mideast Maneuvers

It remains to be seen whether America will heed Sadat's implicit call for a change in attitude now that Egypt is keeping somewhat aloof from Moscow. Also of interest will be any propositions Mrs. Golda Meir makes. As for the future, the orientation of Egypt will doubtless be made clearer more by deeds than by words. It will be interesting to see whether President Sadat will modify the balance within his government, as has been rumored, and whether he really intends to undertake a major visit to Europe by the end of next month.

ALGIERS.—It is still too early tinues a passive or even aggres-to assess the importance of sive attitude toward the Arabs, the withdrawal—at President el-Sadat's request—of the bulk of Moscow's enormous military mission in Egypt. Such is the view of Hoosri Boumediene, President of Algeria and one of the Arab world's most important leaders.

For Boumediene: "This could be just a tempest in a glass, not a big development. It has a great deal of publicity but the event interest. What was actually done is less significant than the way in which it was done and why.

"One might be able to deduce -although I do not know-that Cairo is indicating it would welcome some sign from the United States that the Israelis will now be pressed to evacuate the Egyptian territory they hold. During the next two or three months we should see."

Algerian More

Boumediene points out that had Cairo simply wished to send home several thousand Russians because their training and instructional job had been accomplished, this could have been discreetly done. On a smaller scale, something similar occurred here.

Algeria's forces are largely equipped with Soviet weapons and there has been a Russian military mission that was greatly reduced in precisely the unadvertised way Boumediene mentions. But el-Sadat obviously had a reason for emphasizing his move. This, for the Algerian president, is the key.

He reckons it is a safe assumption that the Middle East was discussed in Moscow when Nixon visited Brezhnev. Was some kind of new approach, some accord on defusing the area, agreed on then? Is the Cairo move a signal to Washington?

"The departure itself isn't what Bonnediene believes. But if it is a signal that means an eventual reorientation in U.S. policy, then it could be a historic event. If it only means the Rusthe same degree in Egypt, then it is unimportant.

"But we cannot assume the United States will profit from the occasion. Were President Nixon to insist Israel should return to Its June, 1967, frontiers, that would be a real change." Boumediene, however, indicates skep-

He tends to dismiss as insignificant the purely strategic aspect of the Soviet departure, even if it eventually affected the secord under which Mose fleet is privileged to use facilities in Egyptian ports.

Any U.S. Move?

"The global military balance isn't," he argues, "dependent on whether ten or fifteen thousand Russians leave Egypt or even there are fewer naval facilities in the long run. U.K. Labor Problems

Even a distinguished generalist like Bernard Levin (IRT, July 25) should not be allowed ten mistakes of fact in one paragraph, especially about a controversy as pressing as the British docks

1. The dockers have long since agreed to handle containers which are packed at the factory, or de-livered to one consignee. As individuals, dockers have taken to container work very well, but there were 60,000 four years ago; new there are about 42,000 with work, on average, for $2,000, and the decline for available work is continuing. What the dockers have tried to keep for themselves is "groupage"—the putting to-Rether of cons ferent origins in one container. or the breaking up of a container's contents for different destinations. The Liverpool dockers "blacked" containers from baulage companies who would not sign an agreement to give this work to "registered" labour (there has been a register of dock labour for 25 years). The original actions in the new National Industrial Relatious Court were brought by companies in the inland towns of St. Helens and Warrington against the Transport and General Workers' Union, to which most dockers belong. A Swiss-owned firm in Hull brought a similar action.

3. The dockers 'blacked" the containers because they were "grouped" by non-registered, not -union labour. In fact, most of the other workers concerned have also been members of the TGWU Britain's largest labor union. There has always been about "dock work" done "outside the dock gate"; since 1966 dock leaders have argued about dock work before tribunals, but without saving many members' jobs. 4. London dockers extended "blacking" as well. They also started to picket depots in the area where alleged "dock work" was done by unregistered labour. A group of workers at Chobha Farm depot (all TGWU members) got an order from the NIRC against this picketing. The pickets' leaders defied it, the NIRC ordered them to prison for contempt, but the Court of Appeal reversed the ruling. The Midland Cold Storage, an employer, took similar action and won a similar order against picketing their depot, and it is for defying this order that the five men went to

5. Midland Cold Storage workers (who are in another union) organized counter-pickets, and truck-drivers also "blacked" London docks in retaliation. There had been no strike action until the men went to prison.

6. The major legal battle was not about whether trade unions were responsible for the actions of their members, but whether the TGWU was responsible for the actions of its ship stewards in Liverpool Docks. The NIRC said it was responsible the Court of Appeal said it was not, and the House of Lords is now weighing the final appeal. The decision turned on whether stewards were the servants of the union or merely its agents, There is a subsidiary legal point on which only the NIRC so far has given jodgment -whether otherwise lawful picketing becomes an "unfair industrial practice" wheo it is in support of an "unfair industrial practice," the new civil wrong created by the Industrial Rela-tions Act.

7. As we have seen, the "high legal drama" is still under way, but all that the Court of Appeal has decided is that in the cir-cumstances of Liverpool Docks the TGWU was not liable in contempt for the actions of its stewards there, and that the picketing at Chobham Farm did not justify depriving a man of his

8. If the union is not responsible, then the ship stewards are not protected. The framers of the Industrial Relations Act hoped that British trade unions would rapidly transform themselves into command hierarchies with a high degree of domestic control and a place on an official register conunder previous legislation to almost all industrial action. They have been disappointed.

I should add that the number of jobs involved in these "blacking" escapades is a fleabite compared to the total of dock jobs which have been lost. The courts are like nurses dressing pimples while doctors disagree on the actual disease. To be sure the whole affair should be better ordered and a lot of people besides Mr. Levin have gotten into a state of apocalyptic excitement about The truth, at the level where I operate, is much flatter, drearies more untidy, indicating weakness and confusion where there should be determination and clear perception. Talking of tidiness, when Mr. Levin was younger he initiated the passing of the Litter Act on the good ground that it was unable; no word then of a trial of strength between the litter louts and the supremacy of Parliament. Press Freedom

Several years ago I wrote my one and only letter to an editor; it was to support a young reporter's right of free express Today I find that some of that free expression, in the July 20th Herald Tribune, has severely ruised my sensitivities. First I find the Newspaper Guild has taken up the practice of endorsing political candidates. My question: How does the Guild ropose to support its candidate? Will its members print only those editorials which speak well of its favorite and ill of the opponent? I wonder if young reporters will feel the pressure to dig up sout on the present administration in order to please the editor? Oh, I know there have been pressures before, but a step such as this seems to go beyond anything ever seen in the past. In my own mind, I must from this mos on consider the possibility that every story about the political campaign is just somewhat twisted or misrepresented.

The final blow was the inane article by Joseph Kraft, It sounded like something we used to write in sophomore journalism classes. My point of view is not colored by a pro-war sentiment. I was a conscientions chiector who fought for three years for my right to enter combat without a weapon and I speak from a background of liberal edocation. "I have seen," Mr. Kraft says, and throughout his article he speaks of what he feels and the total expression seems to be "war is bad" and "the enemy doesn't like us." This is front-page news?

Perhaps the CIA has infiltrated the news media and is out to destroy them by making them appear as fools of partisan persussion. If that is the case, they are off to a great start.

With Connally unavailable as nobody else desirable, Preside Nixon's decision to keep his e. plosively controversial Vice-Pres dent was ordained many week ago, but his announcement of that decision last Saturday defi nitely was not.

To the contrary, Mr. Nixon des perately wanted some element of to be the duliest nominating convention in this century. So h quietly passed word to politics advisers that he would say noth ing until mid-August—on the ver eve of the Aug. 21 Miami Beach

What disrupted that presidential timetable was the sudden uncontrollable surge of "anybody

Split Loomed

Jumping the gun on his timetable. President Nixon effectively stopped this anti-Agnew tumult before it picked up momentum. In doing so, he sidetracked a potentially divisive struggle be tween the party's left and right wings which could have left debilitating wounds.

Containing that left-right split, in fact, has been one of Mr. Nixon's enduring political occu-pations since last December, when right-wing Rep. John Ashbrook of Obio confounded the White House and announced his own prdential candidacy.

Ashbrook's decision to o himself as a rallying point conservatives unhappy about Nixon's welfare reform plan tions with Moscow triggered cret negotiations between cor vatives and ton White H political aide Charles Colsor,

Designers Are Shunning Extremes

By Eugenia Sheppard PARIS, July 27.—Though any actual news from the madeto-order fashion collections, finishing here today, could be contained in an eye dropper, the week has had its good points. In the course of four days, Emanuel Ungaro has become a top-ranking Paris designer.

The flirtation with cashmere that started in New York has turned into a mad love affair in Paris. Almost all fabrics are double-faced, something for the American manufacturers to cope with. Gray flannel is way in. used for everything from the famous gray flannel suit to evening clothes.

Paris fashions go to no extremes, but there are lots of sleeveless coats, all-length jackets and fur coats dyed in such fashion colors as pink mink and maroon fox. If you don't own a around your neck, you might as well etay at home. There are so many good-looking evening clothes in Paris that a woman can hardly help finding the right thing. Though there are fewer mat jersies, even at Madame Grès, and clothes have a little more shape with Givenchy liking tissue-weight faille, the overall look is still very soft.

People haven't looked hard at feet in a fashion show for a long caftan types that Mme. Grès altime, but this season shoes.

This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films:

"F.T.A.," a documentary directed by Francine Parker about Jane Fonda and Donald Sutherland's entertailment tour of U.S. military basee in the Pacific, got a mixed review from Roger Greenspun. "A lot of the show must have been very funny, with quence: an anti-American guera kind of humor genninely in touch with the desperation borne of simply being in the service. But as presented in the movie,

Some of the loveliest, on the up and up and many of for instance, those in shades of them are becoming more slender. though there is no sign of the return of the spike.

Probably because the fabrics were so lavish, the collections seemed to be better than last January and more like their old selves. The few that are still in the race have evidently made up their minds not to play both sides and to be made-to-order designers with fewer overtones of

Mme. Gres, recently elected president of the Chambre Syndicale, the official organization of Paris designers, was the last on the program this afternoon. Always interesting to watch because of its independence and a kind of artless disorganization, the Gres collection is more of a treat than ever this time.

Mme. Grès makes some marvelous coats, quite different from all the ragian sleeves, drop shoulders and fabric tie belts that are all over town. Hers are big coats with swingy backs, but they are still small through the top with no collars and what they used to call bell sleeves. The best are the mohairs, gray taupe with its own hood and a lively plaid.

The evening clothes are all ways does superbly. She never Occasionally the F.T.A. troupe becomes involved with the local population, so that we may hear the Just Grievances Against American Imperialism of the people of Okinawa or Japan or wherever ... I found most of this a predictable bore, but it did allow for the film's only really striking serilla theater pageant in the Philippines that momentarily turns revolutionary passion into a romantic gesture of extraorgold and yellow chiffon, have alip on over the head with a deep point front and back. Besides the caftans. Mme Gres makes half a dozen evening gowns in deep purple crepe and chiffon, to say nothing of her black velvet series. Sha is the only designer to bypass the classic daytime shirtwaist dress of which there are literally hundreds in Paris. Her dresses are molded with a wide band around middle and tucked through the top to show there's a bosom beneath.

Philippe Venet's collection earlier in the week wasn't intoxicating but full of nice clothes for nice women to wear.

Venet is headquarters for all kinds and lengths of jackets, which, being basically a coat teresting. Pants are completely missing from most of the Paris collections though designers say their nonappearance is purely coincidental. They simply think that most women already own enough and aren't willing to buy them at couture prices. Venet, though, believes they're impor-tant and shows as many as he does dresses.

Most of his daytime dresses are shirtwaist-type prints.

You came it. Patou has it, as far as the Paris trends are concerned. Designer Michel Goma's gray suits are the youngest and liveliest. He has the jackets with extended cap shoulders but no sleeves, the knit pockets, the contrasting sleeves, the shirtwais: dresses the fox boas and all tho things people are talking about. Don't ask me how he manages it.

The two best advertisements for Jean Louis Scherer are his own wife end the Counters d'Ornano who along with her husband, Count Hubert d'Ornano, owns the operation. At the opening the other day, the countess wore one of his prints under a hot pink

Lots of Parls socialites turned ont for the collection and Jo Hughes was there from New York with her little dog. Tony. Some of the thinge Scherer showed

The only new hairdo to make an impact in the collection is Alexandre's with a long page-boy back that he holds in a jeweled

FILMS IN LONDON

'Cabaret' Distinguished, Succ

By Thomas Quina Curtiss LONDON, July 27 (IET).

Three decades ago Christopher Isherwood caught with memorable trenchancy the sinister turbulence of the German cepital on the eve of the Nazi coup in his diary-like storics about Berlin. John Van Druten, the Anglo-American playwright, dramatized the "I Am a Camera" tale and Hal Prince, in turn, produced a musical version, "Cabaret" (score by John Kander, book by Joe Masteroff), which has now been transformed into an arresting and distinguished motion picture.

The film is a great success in London (at the Prince Charles), and it has been selected for projection at the forthcoming Venice Festival. It will have its Continental premiere in Paris in September.

Liza Minnelli is Sally Bowles, the party-loving Yankes flibber-tiglibet additt in the swampy nightlife of the sick city. Delud-ing herself that stardom is just around the corner, she surrenders casually and constantly on the wrong easting couch. It is smashing characterization, full-bloodied. funny and fanciful, but her consummate professionalism in rendering her numbers in the tawdry nightclub makes it difficult to believe that Sally would have remained long "undiscovered." She keeps hoping that Max Reinhardt will show up. If he had, he would have signed her at once. In the sequences of Sally'e complicated off-stage existence—as a yearning inmate of a back street boarding house -she is entirely convincing as she recites her gaudy ambitions,

Michael York, one of England's ablest young actors, scores emphatically as the Isherwood observer, a Cambridge graduate come to Berlin for additional study, who ekes out his rent money by giving English lessons in the seedy rooming house where Sally lives. BEARING EUROPS CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY OF

Glen Tetley's 'Laborintus' Booed, Cheered

By Oleg Kerensky

LONDON, July 27 (IRT).—The American choreographer Glen Tetley, who specialize avant-garde ballets for small com-panies like Netherlands Dance Theater and Ballet Rambert, made his Covent Garden debut ast night with "Laborintus", an ambitious new work for the Royal Ballet. It is not his first creation for the Royal Ballet but "Field Figures" was made for the smaller touring section and only subsequently transferred to the opera louse. "Laborintus" is the first ballet he has made specially for the Royal Opera House.

In this environment, Tetley has found two advantages. The first is the possibility of having spectacular scenery by Rouben Ter-Arutumian; the second is the chance to work with six distin-guished dancers—Lynn Seymour, Deanne Bergama, Vergie Derman, Desmond Kelly, David Wall and the incomparable Rudolf Nureyev. Even if one is not particularly interested in what the dancers are doing, one is bound to be more or less held by the way they do it, and by the setting in which they

Indeed the setting strikes me as the most remarkable aspect of "Laborintus." At first the dancers advance slowly down a ramp from the back of a darkened stage; later we see that there is a starshaped metallic construction hanging on high and some porta-ble mirrors on each side, which reflect the dancers at curious angles, sometimes upside-down. Eventually an elaborate beckcloth is revealed showing the labyrinth of the title or perhaps, as an American friend suggested, blown-up, upside-down photo of a Midwest sports stadium,

The costumes are less remarkable: the now virtually obligatory white tights for the three couples, top. ss for the men, and some white briefs with string entwined around their naked bodies for two further men who act as porters for the mirrors and who end the ballet writing alone on the stage. (David Ashmole and Julian Hosking were suitably lithe and elegant as these two extras.)

The Music

The music, Berio's "Laborintus II," is a collage for prerecorded tapes, live human speaking and singing voices, and 17 instruments, The program belofully printed the words spoken by Cathy Berberian the narrator and explained that they are based on Dante, the Bible and T. S. Eliot. It did not explain what they mean or why, for example, the chorus at one point repeatedly shouts "With usura, with usura," a strange combination of languages which must surely be mean-ingless to most of the andience. Nor was there any preparation in the program for the male nar-rator who shouted "Royal Opera House, Covent Garden" during Nureyev's solo. A bit of improvisatory art perhaps? In any case, words were frequently superimposed over each other and over other noises in such a way that nothing was intelligible.

I have left the actual dancing till last because the movements Tetley gives his dancers are as difficult to describe as they are boring and repetitive to watch. The vaguely symnastic syrations performed by this talented cast seemed little different from those performed in other Tetley works by other, less famous dancers. There is obviously a fascination

Concerts at Festival Estival

PARIS, July 27 (IHT).—Paris does not supply summer music as weightly as the venerable Proms concerts do for Londoners, but the French capital's Festival Estival—now in its seventh year—fills the gap very nicely in its own quiet way.

This year 41 concerts are being given between July 17 and Sept. 18 in five places—Saint-Germain-des-Frés and Saint-Séverin, the Sainte-Chapelle and the royal chapel of the Vincennes chateau and the anditorium of the Faculté de Droit in Rue d'Assas. The preponderance of churches in this list suggests somewhat the nature of the programs, but within that limitation there is great variety. Sixteen of the concerts commemorate the tricentennial of the death of Heinrich Schütz, with his own music and that of contemporaries, and three others are devoted to relatively little-known choral works by Mendelssohn, Scarlatti and Dvorak.

Last night, Saint-Germain-des-Prés church was well-filled for the first of two Mozart concerts by Arthur Grumiaux and the Ensemble Instrumental de France. The Belgian violinist's credentials as a Mozartian hardly need to be presented any more—his recordings with Clara Haskill of the plano-violin sonatas are already "historic"—and he was in good form, with a glowing, silvery tone and eloquent

He played the first and last of the five concertos that the 19-yearold Mozart turned out in 1775, the serenade-like K. 207 in B-flat and the far more individual K. 219 in A. full of surprises that never feil to surprise, from the adagio passage that interrupts the first movement to the "Turkish" interlude and sudden, subdued ending of the last. The concertos, and the two divertimentos CK 136 and 138) that began and ended the concert, were done without a conductor—some-thing that the Ensemble Instrumental can get away with because it is one of those chamber crobestras that actually does have the inner cohesion and sharpness of the good string quartet.

Grumiaux will play K. 218 and 218 on Friday, when the program also will include another divertimento and the Commor Adagio and Fugue. Ideal music for a summer night—but you are warned that the

Eiko Circumvents Export Curb

Eiko Business Machines, of Japan, has arranged with Doddwell & Co., and Kaufhof AG to have desk-top electronic calculators assembled in West Germany. Elko plans to start shipping kits next month at a monthly rate of about 5.000 units. Doddwell and Kaufhof are building a factory in Germany for assembly of the machines. Sales will be in the German and other European markets. Eiko says the arrangement is designed to get around tighter self-imposed export curbs on Japanese calculators to the European market.

Wall Sreet Price Drop Is Led by Holiday Inns By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW ! ORK, July 27 (NYT) .- North American Rockwell, whose

There was a nerrous uncertone to the stock market today as prices registered their third straight setback and as another big glamour issue-Holiday Inne--pluuged sharply on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, cootinuing its recent pattern, opened with a gain in early trading and then steadily gave ground to fall 5.72 and finish at 926.85. Volume fell to 13.87 million shares from 14.13 million yes-

Holiday Inns, the nation's largest lodging chain, plunged 7 1 2 to 42 1 2 as the market's volume leader. It responded to a decline in June-quarter profits and prov-ed resoundingly that institutional holders are sensitive to any surprise adverse developments.

"This is a market dominated by institutional holders," explained one Wall Street broker. "And when they see something they don't like, they all seem to head for the door on the same day."

In the recent past, lower earoings have resulted in cracking stock prices for such formar favorites as H. & R. Block and Handolman, as well as New Process on the American Stock Exchange. Spectacular Issue

Holiday Inns, a spectacular market performer over the last decade, sold as low as 3 5 8 in 1962, adjusted for splits. Its high this year is 55 5/8. An advisory service has noted a slowing in the company's growth rate in recent periods, as woll as uncertaintles raised by the expansion program abroad. Expansion plans call for the opening of an estimated 500 inns in Europe by 1930.

The other big losers on the active list were Fairchild Camera, down 5 3/8 to 41 1.'8, and Grumman, down 3 5 8 to 13 7/8 after reaching a yearly low at 12 1.2. Fairchild reported a significant profit gain for the June quarter over first-quarter figures, Howcause of seasonal factors they cannot assume a further earnings improvement in the third quarter. That statement apparently caused selling in the stock.

Grumman dropped in reaction to its failure to land the soughtafter space shuttle contract. Instead, that main multibillion-

UN Unit to Probe The Activities of Giant Companies

GENEVA, July 27 (UPI: - Unit-Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was instructed today to set up a group of international experts to study the activities of multinational corporations.

A resolution approved by the economic committee of the Eco-nomic and Social Council asked Mr. Waldhelm to appoint between 14 and 20 persons to make the investigation.

Passed unanimously, the reso-lution was introduced by Chile whose representative, Hernan Santa Cruz, charged that one such giant company, Interna-Telephone & Telegraph Corp., had tried to overthrow his country's government.

The UN study group should draft a "code of conduct" for multinational corporations, which, be said, have become supranational and conduct negotiations over the heads of governments.

The problem becomes clear when a company the ITT can go to the U.S. government and demand that the government of Chile he overthrown," Mr. Santa Cruz said,

He said the giant corporations also bear a large share of the responsibility for present monetary troubles because they act on their own, without consulting governments, in moving around huge accounts of money.

This announcement is neither an offer to sell nor the solicitation of en offer to buy any of these securities. The offering is made only by the Prospectus.

The diagramed deal provides some interesting problems. North-South have the values for a game, but it is not easy to choose the right game after East has opened the bidding in third seat with one heart.

The best contract is five diamonds, and guided by the opening bld, the declarer should finesse at once in clubs, thus disposing of dum:ny's beart losers on the ace-king of clubs and losing just a trump trick and eventually a spade trick.

In the actual auction, South chose to overcall one spade. He held one less spade and rather more points than his partner could expect for his bid, but no bid by South was completely satisfactory.

North produced a cue-bid of two hearts, which in the partnership style promised a spade fit

West opened the heart five, and invited came. He expected his partner to have a five-card space suit. South not unnaturally bid four spaces, since be had far more high-card strength than his overcall had promised.

West doubled gleefully, and did not realize that his opening lead was going to be crucial. He led his singleton heart, expecting to beat the contract about three

South knew from the opening bid that East held the high-card strength, so be could expect the club finesse to win and the diamond finesse to lose. He won the first trick in dummy with the ace, finessed in clubs and discarded dummy's hearts on his high clubs. Next he ruffed his last club, cashed the diamond ace, dropping the queen, and led East naively played low, and the declarer won with the jack. West now held only his six trumps and was gnashing his teeth. When a heart was led, he made an error in his turn by ruffing with the queen, permitting South to make an overtrick.

WIKHAIL BULGAKOV is one match for Soviet Bu of the great satirists of Soviet literature's most exciting period, the twenties and early thirties. Several years ago he enjoyed a brief speil of popular-ity in the West when his postho-mous novel, "The Master and Margarita," made the best-seller lists. Now, with the publication of "The Early Plays" and "Diabolisd and Other Stories," we have a wealth of new and highly rewarding examples of Bulgakovian fantasy.

In "The Master and Margarita"

the grotesque—an integral ele-ment of the Russian literary tradition—was perfectly aituned to the events and people of post-revolutionary Russia. Most of the works in the two new volumes (as well as works published elsewhere, such as The Heart of a Dog") share "The Master and Margarita's" hyperbolic satire. Bulgakov revels in the magnification or repetition of bizarre detail. He enjoys mixing the cumbersome acronyms of the period (NARKOMPROS, the People's Commissariat of Eudcation! with his own fantastic inventions (GLAVISENERBAZSPIMAT, The Main Central Base for Match Production Materials) in such a way that they all become equally improbable. He is also constantly playing on the word "former," the period's euphemism for "pre-revolutionary." In the play "Zoya's Apartment" a "former count" notices a zoo-cage sign that reads "the former chicken is on display." When queried, the guard on duty explains that the former chicken has turned roost-

Occasionally, what starts as a reference to the problems of the times takes on a more general significance. Moscow's bousing shortage, for example, serves azthe structural backbone in "Zova's. Apartment"-the apartment, incidentally, is a high-class brothel -and in several short stories ("A Treatise on Housing," "Four Portraits") it looms so large in the characters' struggle for exist-ence that it finally comes to symbolize that struggle. Yet nowhere in these plays and stories does Bulgakov reach the universality that the Christ and Faust motifs give him in "The Master and Margarita."

There is a compensation, though: in the stories and plays Bulga-kov reveals himself as master of a second style, radically different from his usual grotesqueries, which harkened back to Gogol (Bulgakov acknowledges the debt in the story "The Adventures of Chichikov," in which the picaresque hero of Gogol's masterpiece "Dead Souls" discovers he is no

GCH, July 27 (AP).—Orzs of the Olympic Games, open here Aug. 26, startork this week on solving sms uncovered during the days of the West German as championships held last L at the Games complex the biggest problems were sed by the architectural focal ant of the Games—the world's sgest roof, draped over the dympic Stadium and two starby arenas.

One newspaper called the 80,000-capacity stadium "Ger-many's biggest frying pan," after athletes competing in torrid heat had complained about erratic air conditions apparently caused by the roof.

A distance runner, Harald Norpoth, said a lack of air on the track nearly caused him to abandon the 5,000-meter race, which he won in the slow time of 14 minutes 11.8 seconds.

"I found the worst conditions here of my career," said the slander 29-year-old Norpoth after the race in humid, 80degree evening heat. Wind Factor

Long jumpers, such as Heide

Athletes and sweltering spectators-40,000 of them at Sunday's final events also complained of the solar magnifying power of the steel and spunglass roof, which cost an estimated $52 million, twice as much as the stadium.

Heat trapped in the bowlshaped stadium often pushed field temperatures to as high as 95 degrees, causing the artificial track surface to soften and thus slow the times, sprinters said.

Another problem exposed during the trials was that of the hammer-throw area. One competitor threw the 16-pound ball onto the track three times, narrowly missing a runner on

Finger May Put Nicklaus Out of PGA

By Lincoln A. Werden

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 27 (NYT).—Jack Nicklaus was re-leased this morning from Univer-sity Hospital after undergoing surgery for an infected right index finger and said he is still hopeful he will be able to defend his Professional Golfers Association title next week.

He said, however, that only quick action on the finger saved his chances for playing in the tournament, which begins Aug. 3 at Oakland Hills Country Club, Birmingham, Mich. "The doctors told me that if I hadn't undergone the operation I would have been out for at least two weeks," Nicklaus said. Nicklaus had been slated to be Arnold Palmer's partner in the national team championship, which starts today at the Laurel Valley Country Club here. They have won it three times including the last two years.

Soon after Nicklaus's operation, Palmer was saked to select a substitute for the golfer who is the Masters and United States Open champion and recently finished second to Lee Trevino by a stroke in the British Open.

Palmer's choice was a 25-yearold professional, Jack Lewis of Florence, S.C., whom he has known since Lewis's college days at Wake Forest. Lewis joined the pro ranks two years ago after having been a Walker Cup player.

Lewis understandably seemed thrilled at a chance to fill a major leaguer's role. He has won only $1,423 in prize money this year, competing in 21 events. Last year he was runner-up in the Magno-lia Classic at Hattiesburg, Miss.,

He attended Wake Forest on the Lee Trevino, the British Open champion, and his new partner, Ray Floyd, former PGA title-holder, quickly moved into a fa-vored role for the $40,000 first prize of the $300,000 purse.

Last year, Trevino and Howie Johnson failed to survive the 36hole cut over the 7,045-yard course. The format calls for the better ball of the partners to count at each hole in four 18-hole rounds. Palmer is the "touring professional" at Laurel Valley and

The Flavor of Wrigley

From Chicago, the Last Hurrah

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, July 27 (NYT). -With the single exception of Connie Mack, every man who ever owned a baseball team long enough to get dry behind the swivel chair has from time to time clutched his manager by the scruff of the neck and the blouse of the britches and, employing the clean-and-ierk technique, flung him into the street. Some do the deed in awkward, embarrassed desperation and some make it a hobby, but none of the others ever had Phil K. Wrigley's flair.

It is an inborn telent, not a matter of long practice, for although P. K.'e 39 years as proprietor of the Cubs make him the senior member of the lodge, there are owners who can go through two or even three managers in a season, whereas Wrigley went five years in a row without any manager at all. Since he took office in 1934, the Cubs have had only nine, 10 or 11 managers, depending on whether you count Charlie Grimm as one, two or three. (For years, Phil was addicted to hiring Charlie Grimm as some men are addicted to alcohol. After a dozen years without a relapse, appears to have kicked the habit, but anthorities versed in these matters say there is no sure cure. If Whitey Lockman shouldn't work out as Leo Durocher's replacement, one phone call is all it would take.)

Wrigley's sense of theater, gift of timing and felicitous phrasing were never displayed to better advantage than in the disposal of Durocher. Time and again over the last three years, demands for Leo's shiny head grew loud in Chicago, and P.K. refused to budge. He hired a peacemaker, Hank Aguirre, as coach expressly assigned to lubricate relations between the manager and the players, and the manager and the press. He waited until the storms had subsided, until a recess when public attention was directed toward the All-Star the midnight announcement. There was no pussylooting about whether Durocher jumped, fell or was pushed, He was "per-carnival in Atlanta. Then came

This came to pass in a season that had been notable for sweetness and light on Chicago's North Side until the last few weeks. The Cubs were winning, and such eminent authorities as Durocher and Joe Pepitone were describing them as "great." Even after the Pirates moved in and knocked them into a spin that took them down to fourth place, the suggestion that Durocher's days The pitching is all right. vision interview from the ball- his rookie days as a Yankee inpark, the manager repeated that this was a great team, the best he had managed in Chicago, with a chance to "go all the way." "I only hope," Leo Durocher said, "that when they do I'm still here to see it." Verily, Phil Wrigley moves in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. Late last season when a clubhouse meeting had degenerated into a shouting match between manager and players, Wrigley ran a paid advertisement defending Durocher, advising the "dump Durocher" bloc to give up, and promising to find new homes for any players who might be restive in Chicago. (The only regular who departed between seasons was Ken Holtzman, a nitcher whose won-and-lost record suggests that he has found happiness in Oakland, of all places.) Now, when there has been no outward evidence of unrest in the ranks, Wrigley says that if there has been any friction this year between the players and Durocher, the change will enable the Cubs to find out for themselves whether or not they are pennant contenders.

So this is how it ends for the most noisily controversial figure of his time in baseball. As years are counted in this game, his. was an uncommonly long time, spanning almost five decades from

The Met Gets 11th Goya Painting

NEW YORE, July 27 (NYT),-The Mctropolitan Museum. which already owns 10 undisputed Goya paintings, has added another major work of the Spansh master to its collection. A full-length portrait of a young boy. the canvas is valued at between $2 and $3 million by Jose Lopez-Rey, one of the world's leading Gora experts. He believes that the oil is "one of Goya's masterpieces and one of his best portraits."

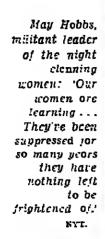

Now on view in the muzeum's European paintings galleries, the portrait was given to the Metropolitan by Mrs. Umberto de Martini, a distinguished collector, now living in Paris. She is an American who was formerly the wife of Harrisoo Williams, a Long Island utilities tycoon.

The canvas, approximately 3 feet by 3 1 2 feet, depicts a boy about 5 years of age in a child's military costume of shimmering white pantaloons, a delicately laced neckplece and a snug darkgreen jacket. Against an ochre background highlighted with orange uncerpainting, the boy loosely holds a red-feathered military cap in his right hand and the rein of a large bobbyhorse in his left.

The youngster, who is sur-rounded by toys, is identified in the lower left corner of the picture as Pepito Costa y Bonells, the grandsoo of the Duchess of Alba's physiciao. The Duchess of Alba was a patron and close friend of Goya's and posed for him many times. Mr. Lopez-Rey believes that the duchess may have paid Goya about $1,000 for the portrait.

Although the Spanish artist often satirized his adult sitters by emphasizing their least becoming traits, he generally treated children with sympathy and tenderness. The Metropolitan picture shows the boy looking as if he had put down his toys for a moment to giance at the man who was painting his picture. "He might have been a playmate of one of Goya's grandchildren," says Mr. Lopez-Rey.

Under the name of the child is painted in black "Por Goya" by Goya). Today, all scholars accept the painting as a genuine Goya work. One Goya expert, however, the late Aurelio Beruete, agreed that Goya was responsible for the painting but sug-gested that the signature bad been added in the 19th century.

LONDON (NYT).-Maggie, a blue-cyed mother of five children, doesn't have a bed. In between her two jobs-coe as a guide at school crossings and the other as a night cleaner at the large Shell-Mex Building in south London—she catches odd hours of sleep on her living-room sofa, Last year site took a week off, her first vacation since 1943.

"Night cleaning isn't so bad," she said. "The hardest part is staying awake."
Her friend Alice (the women declined to give full names for fear of harassment. has been working as a night cleaner for

She is sure she is under-paid and overworked, but with seven children she bad to do something to oake ends meet. Each night she cleans about 40 rooms and four lavatories. When volunteers from women's liberation came to their building one evening to urge the women to consider unionizing, she was one of the first to listen.

"I wasn't afraid." she said. "If they sack me. I can always work somewhere elsc. It's as simple as that."

For the last eight years, the movement to organize night cleaning womeo has been carried on almost single-handedly by May Hobbs, a night cleaner, mother and socialist. In recent months, however, several groups within the Women's Liberation Workshop bave actively taken up the cam-

In Loodon, where the movement has had its most significant impact, night cleaners work from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m. Many stay later to finish their allotted jobs; there is no overtime pay.

For their dinner hour (usually 1 a.m.) they bring their own sandwiches; the better buildings, such as Shell-Mex, provide bot water for coffee or tea. Salaries range from £13 to £14 a week ($28.80 to $33.60). Cleaners are not guaranteed sick pay or any vacation time in nonunionized buildings. At Mrs. Hobbs's home in north London the other day, as she sat surrounded by children, she chronicled her history as a night cleaner, and described the recent successes of the campaign to prevent the women from belog victimized.

"I had to work at night. With four children, you don't do it for pin money, you go out because you need money desperately, but you can't leave the children to

"I came from a political family, so I knew we were bloomin' exploited." continued Mrs. Hobbs. as she simultaneously bandaged her 4 1/2-year-old son's cut, and rocked a friend's 9-month-old baby girl.

"We always knew the best thing for us to do was to have a unico, but we didn't have the support to form our own. We needed backing from the trade unionists."

One specific incident eight years ago made Mrs. Hobbs and her co-workers realize the power of the picket. The cleaning contractor servicing the Mayfair building where they worked fired a black girl.

"They just didn't want any blacks on the building." Mrs. Hobbs said angrily. "So we bad a strike. We just stayed out one night and picketed. They couldn't let the building stay dirty, so the next day we got all our demands."

"It was kept very quiet, but we woo. Then the contractor split us up to different buildings. I got the sack, and couldn't work for about a year."

At that time, because the women were working on a commercial building, they had been eligible to join the Transport and General Workers Union. Women working on government buildings were eligible to foln the Civil Service Unioo.

Nelther union gave them the support and encouragement they wanted. Eventually many, including Mrs. Hobbs, got disgusted

Two years ago when wages and conditions still seemed intolerable to them, they again decided to seek union support. But this time they had an ally—the women's liberation mm cment.

"Month after month they stuck to us and never faltered," said Mrs. Hobbs. "Without them we would have failed."

Members of the Women's Liberation Workshop have played two essential roles. First, on weekly visits to selected buildings across London, they introduced the cleaners to the idea of a union by distributing leaflets and then staying around to discuss them.

Second, they help the cleaners negotiate both with the unions and with the cleaning contractors.

Together the members of women's lib and interested cleaners have formed the Cleaners Action Group. Its major goals are the adequate staffing of all huildings, sick pay, vacation pay (either one day a month worked or two weeks a year), and a minimum wage of £18 to £19 a week (about

Mrs. Hohbs is currently blacklisted by cleaning contractors and cannot work, but she continues to be the movement's most active member. She writes a monthly newsletter. The Cleaner's Voice, and spends most of her time supporting and organizing night cleaners.

This kind of commitment takes money ("I can't really afford not to work; people help me by donations"), babysitters ("Most of it is done free by members of women's lib"), and determination ("They've threatened to break my arms and legs").

"It gets very depressing at times," continued Mrs. Hobos, "but when you hear of women who have stuck together and won, it perks you right up. Our women are learning to run themselves. They've been suppressed for so many years, they have nothing left to be frightened of."

She Really Took a Load PEOPLE:

Jeanna Shaw of Waltham, Massachusetts, is doing many things this summer she's never done before-wearing shorts, roller skating, and tying her own shoes. At 337 pounds those activities were physically impossible. But now, 180 pounds slimmer, Mrs. Shaw is joining her three children in enjoying life. Her weight had climbed steadily over the past 14 years and when the bathroom scales broke under her 300 pounds she entered St. Elizabeth's Hospital for endocrine tests. When she found out ber problem wasn't glandular, Mrs. Shaw began dieting, with professional help.
"When the weight started going, I got hooked and had to keep with it," she said. She now weighs 157 pounds. Mrs. Shaw said be-fore she started dieting a "nor-mal" breakfast would consist of six eggs. a half-pound of bacon and a dozen biscuits. Another woman following a similar controlled dieting program, Lea Allen of Randolf, Massachusetts, lost 45 pounds.

Film maker John Huston look-ed at the line of 500 people waiting to get in to a no-charge retrospective of his old movies at a Manhattan theater and said he was "overwhelmed." Huston, sporting a luxuriant beard and wearing a safari suit appropriate for the showing of "African Queen," was in New York for the opening of his latest film, "Fat City." Asked if he would sit through 14 hours of another director's films, Huston said, "Yes, for two or three people. Then he named them: Fellini, Bergman, Chaplin, Rene Clair, De Sica, William Wyler and John Ford.

The Monaco general court in Monte Carlo has opened investi-gations into an incident in a nightclub there Friday involving Frank Sinatra. It took action after a complaint was brought against the singer by John Rhall. a 22-year-old American student wbo was in the club. Rhall alleged that Sinatra grabbed his camera and threw it into the

She said she suffered a alightly injured leg when a table was overturned. Sinatra left Monte Carlo at the weekend and was last seen in the French Atlantic resort of Biarritz.

Actor Burt Lancaster attacked a home-movie fan who tried to film him on location in Vienna, witnesses said, according to a UPI report. Lancaster kicked the young man in the seat of his pants and threatened ! im with a large rock, witnesses said. The Lancaster, in Vienna to shoot
